Purpose of these conflict of interest (COI) statements

These COI guidelines should ensure that all individuals involved disclose actual or potential conflicts of interest. Conflicts of interest are almost unavoidable. Their disclosure should be seen as a sign of intellectual integrity.

Contributors

All contributors must comply with these COI guidelines as they ensure the integrity and impartiality of contributions and instil confidence in its objectivity among the various actors. This means that each individual discloses his or her financial or non-financial conflicts of interest to the maximum. This may concern actual or potential conflicts of interest as well as interests that could give the impression of possible influence. If you are in doubt about whether to list a relationship/activity/interest, it is preferable that you do so. A conflict of interest can potentially prevent the publication of a CAM Cancer summary. For external experts, a conflict of interest will in principle not prevent participation in a project, provided that a declaration has been drawn up.

Definition of 'Conflict of Interest'

A conflict of interest (i.e. a competing interest) is any financial or non-financial interest, directly or indirectly, that could influence the research conclusions in a particular report or create a situation where a person's judgement could be unreasonably influenced by a personal interest or gain. An indirect interest may include payments that benefit an institution or department for which the person is responsible, but which are not necessarily received by the person, such as industry grants, chairs or contracts, industry sponsorship, financing of a member of staff in the department or the assignment of a task.

Declaration

To the best of my understanding and knowledge, I hereby declare that:

- I do not have any conflict of interest according to the above definition.
- I may have a potential conflict of interest according to the above definition. See detailed description on the previous page.
